Tracy Elissa Nadolny Duguay
Music Teacher – Martin E. Young Elementary School
Music Department Chair – RPS District

Semi-Finalist for Massachusetts Teacher of the Year

*Congratulations!
RPS is proud of you!*

Tracy Duguay is a woman of many talents and skills. She is a passionate music teacher, dedicated Music Department Chair, critical member of the Instructional Leadership Team of the Martin E. Young Elementary School (Young ES), semi-finalist for Massachusetts Teacher of the Year, angelic singer for the Boston Pops and Tanglewood Festival Chorus, competitive athlete in triathlons, and is currently training for an Iron Man competition in August! She is the actual Wonder Woman! Ms. Duguay arrives to work an hour before school to give students who cannot afford private instrument lessons an opportunity to practice with her, at no cost. She has dedicated her blocks in the daily school schedule that allow time for students to participate in band lessons. She is committed to family engagement and often invites families to instrument lessons and “Showcases” that highlight and celebrate the growth and achievement of her students.

Ms. Duguay has instilled in her students a passion for music, and she has guided them to listen critically to compositions and lyrics. She has inspired students to use their musical talents as a way to express themselves and the hardships they face. Ms. Duguay has reached many professional and personal achievements that typically take a life-time to accomplish and she is only in her 10th year of teaching. Tracy is a beloved inspiration to many students, staff members, and friends. She is more than deserving of the state’s recognition, and thus the district’s recognition once again. Congratulations Ms. Duguay! Randolph Public Schools is proud of you and are truly grateful to have you as a teacher in our district and as part of the Young ES team.
